

CFP: Articles Requested for Vol. 25 of Peer-Reviewed Ometeca Journal

Deadlines: abstract and brief bio due Dec. 16, 2019; initial version of article due March 16, 2020

Notification of Acceptance: April 2020; expected publication date—Winter 2020

The Ometeca Institute invites articles for vol. 25 of its peer-reviewed journal, Ometeca. The topic is open, but must address the foci of the Institute and journal, which include “the interrelationships between the humanities and science in Hispanic (Spanish American, Peninsular, and U.S. Latino/a/ix), as well as Luso-Brazilian literatures and cultures” (<https://ometeca.org/>). Papers written in English, Spanish, or Portuguese on the following are especially welcomed: (1) the environment (such as ecocriticism, ecofeminism, the Anthropocene, indigenous perspectives, environmental justice, animal and other biota/human relationships, environmental sciences, and so on); (2) digital humanities; (3) Peninsular, Latin American or Latino/a/ix literature; (4) other arts (including photography, film, etc.); (5) science and humanities (including medicine, technology, etc.).

Please send an abstract (250 words maximum) and a short biographical note (150 words maximum) in the body of your e-mail and any questions to Prof. Alicia Rivero (arivero@unc.edu) no later than Monday, Dec. 16, 2019.

If instructed to submit your paper, please e-mail your article by Monday, March 16, 2020, with its Works Cited (20-40 pp. total, Times New Roman 12 font, double-spaced), as well as a separate title page that contains your full contact information and rank as MS Word attachments to the Editor, Alicia Rivero (arivero@unc.edu). The MLA’s format is required for the article’s body and Works Cited (<https://www.mla.org/MLA-Style/>). Other than for parenthetical notes, use endnotes, not footnotes. Any images need to be your own or public domain with acknowledgements; they will be reproduced in black and white. Follow the instructions for “Submissions” under the “Journal” tab at <https://ometeca.org/>; you can also view the “Table of Contents” of recent and older volumes of Ometeca there.

Please disseminate this “Call for Papers” widely to your e-lists. Thank you.

Cordially,
Alicia Rivero
